The University of Washington School of Law is grateful to the donors who made our dream for the Marian Gould Gallagher Society recognition wall come true. Many thanks to:

Joanne Roddis, her children, and friends who were inspired by the memory of their husband, father, and friend, Dean Emeritus Richard S.L. Roddis (left, above). Dean Roddis was a proud supporter of the Marian Gould Gallagher Law Library because he knew a great law library is essential to create great scholars and outstanding members of the legal community.

Polly McNeill ’87 and her husband David (right, above) are founding members of the Gallagher Society and loyal supporters of the law library. They believe it enhances the quality and stature of the UW School of Law and provides a critical resource to members of the legal profession and the local community. Polly and David hope to encourage others to support the law library and make an investment in this incredible facility.
