Deliberations of the Convention at Olympia.

A FULL REPORT OF THE DEBATES

The delegates and the officers take the oath of office, and the Convention adopts the Revised Constitution.

Olympia, Wash., July 6-The constitutional convention adopted the revised constitution early Sunday afternoon, following an all-day session. The adopted constitution, which is to be submitted to the people next November, contains a number of important provisions including a provision for a statewide referendum on the question of the election of the governor. The convention also adopted a provision for a statewide referendum on the question of the election of the governor. The convention also adopted a provision for a statewide referendum on the question of the election of the governor. necessary to a choice, Mr. Hoyt 49, Warner 16, Congrove 16, Dünbar 1, Jones 1, Shaplen 1.

Judge Hoyt was declared elected, and on motion of Mr. Warner, the election was made unanimous.

Messrs. Warner, Congrove and Lindsay were appointed to conduct the president to the chair, and perform their duty.

Judge Hoyt was presented to the convention as its president by Colonel Moore, the temporary chairman. Upon assuming the chair Judge Hoyt said:

"Gentlemen of the Convention: It is with thoughts too deep for utterance that I return thanks for the high compliment you have paid me. But we are here for work and not for talk. So I shall ask you, without further delay, to accept once more my hearty thanks, and proceed to work."

[Applause.]

Mr. Shandy moved to take recess until 2 o'clock.

Mr. Blanchan objected. He said that twelve weeks from Tuesday evening was the date of the election. If this convention lasted twenty, thirty or forty days, how much time would be left for considering the constitution offered, and for the conducting of the canvass?

Mr. Steele thought nothing would be lost by paying proper attention to dinner.

The presiding officer asked that the motion for recess be temporarily withdrawn, and that being done he proceeded and read a dispatch relative to the disasters at Ellensburgh. The president called attention to the disaster, saying that it was relatively as serious as the one that had recently befallen Seattle, and suggesting that the convention take some action.

Mr. Glowy said he was about to propose a resolution upon the subject, but in order not to take up time, he would move that the president of the convention clothe the proper language the deep sympathy of the convention with the city of Ellensburgh, and send it by telegram.

The president said his personal preference would be to have this done by a committee, but he would do the will of the convention.

Mr. Glowy's motion was adopted.

The convention then took a recess to 2 o'clock.

Following the taking of recess, the following telegram was sent:

OLYMPIA, July 6.

To the Mayor and people of Ellensburgh: By unanimous resolution the constitutional convention expresses deep sympathy and sincere regrets for your city in its hour of affliction. What are your needs?

J. P. HOYT, President.
