The Capital of Washington.

At the last session of the Territorial Legislature a bill was introduced by Senator W. G. Brown, of Yakima, for the incorporation of the town of Walla Walla as a city. It was passed by the Senate and House, and is now awaiting the signature of the Governor. Walla Walla is the capital of the Territory of Washington, and has been the seat of government for the last six years. The town is situated on the south bank of the Columbia River, about twenty miles from the mouth of the Walla Walla River. It is a thriving and prosperous place, with a population of about 5,000. The town is well provided with public buildings, and has a fine system of streets and parks. The capital of Washington is now in a state of transition, and will soon be in a state of preparation for the reception of the Territorial Legislature, which is expected to meet in the fall of the year.
