In our judgment it would be wise for our citizens to begin to agitate the question, who shall represent us in the convention to form our state constitution? It is not necessary to wait until the last moment, and then without due deliberation, select the men that are to represent us. Let the discussion of the competency of our most able men begin at once. In selecting the delegates we do not think that the question, whether they are Republicans or Democrats should be considered. The one question of vital importance is, are the men qualified to give us a constitution such as our needs require? No man should go to the convention hampered by partizan ideas. A delegate who will permit his political creed to influence him in the formation of our constitution, is unfitted to remain a member of a decent community. We have, or least we should have, one paramount object in view, and that—the aggrandisement and wellfare of the future State of Washington.

Let no petty spites or jealousies weigh with our leading men, but let all strive to make a constitution that will be an honor and a glory to the same we bear.
